WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Everything is in the name when it comes to Witch Hazel Salve. E. C. DeWitt & Co., of Chicago, discovered some years ago how to make a salve from witch hazel, that is a specific for piles. For blind, bleeding, itching and protruding piles, eczema, cuts, burns, bruises and all skin diseases DeWitt's Salve has no equal. This has given rise to numerous worthless counterfeits. Ash for DeWitt's—the genuine. Sold by Chas. C. Davis, druggist.

POPE SAYS HE IS NOT SUPERSTITIOUS.

The rumor of the death of the Pope which was circulated in Madrid, having come to the ears of the Pontiff, his holiness exclaimed to a friend:

"What, already? Leo was left in peace for five years after his election, while with me these rumors have begun at the end of only a few months. It may be a good thing to look at this from a superstitious standpoint, but I am quite the other way and think it may even prolong my life."

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury.

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by Druggists, 7c. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

A Virginia woman is the mother of 13 sons, all weighing more than 180 pounds each.

(Good Roads No. 1.)

In my last letter to the SIGNAL I promised your readers to begin with this issue a series of articles on the road question. I will say that I don't want to become monotonous, neither do I wish to be called a "crank," but I want to proclaim the "words of truth and soberness" to honest, thinking minds (i.e.) I want to sow some "good seed" upon fertile soil, so that in due time we may reap an abundant harvest. Now friends, brothers, countrymen, you will all admit without argument, that the roads of Rockcastle are not only bad but very bad in some places almost impassable for wagons or even any mode of travel. You must admit that "bad roads" constitute the greatest drawback to country life, you will admit that the farmers constitute the "bone and sinew" of Rockcastle, and that for the lack of good roads they suffer more than any other class. It is unnecessary therefore for us to discuss now the benefits to be derived from good roads as all are so familiar with the other kind that that part of the matter argues its own side.

Suffice it now to say, that those localities where good roads have been built are becoming richer, more prosperous and more thickly settled, while those which do not possess these advantages are either at a stand still or are becoming poorer and more thinly settled driving our most prosperous and energetic citizens to where these advantages do exist, taking money and enterprise away. Life on a farm as a result of "bottomless roads" often becomes isolated, and barren of social enjoyments and pleasures, having a great tendency to check ambition, weaken energy and paralyze industry.

Good roads in a country like good streets in a town make habitation along them more desirable, they economize time and power in transportation of products, reduce wear and tear on wagons, teams and harness and enhance the value of real estate, farm products, &c; beautify the country through which they pass and double our pleasures. They greatly aid free mail delivery, education, religion and sociability.

One of our leading statesmen once said: "The road and school master are the two most important agents in advancing civilization." The difference my friend between good and bad roads is often equivalent to the difference between gain and loss. Good roads have a money value to farmers as well as social or political value; and leaving out convenience, comfort, social and refined influence, which good roads always enhance, and looking at them only from the "almighty dollar" side they are found to pay handsome dividends each year.

Our next road article will be: "How to get good roads." "Uncle Mart" DeBord's condition has become very serious, though he may yet recover. Measles are on the wane; not much other sickness here now. Nearly all kinds of business at a standstill.

INTERESTING DATA

CULLED FROM THE LAST CENSUS REPORT REGARDING KENTUCKY ILLITERACY DECREASING POPULATION INCREASING.

More Kentucky divorcees are being recorded, education is spreading, the percentage of illiteracy is decreasing and the population of the State is growing fast.

These are the main facts brought out in the Twelfth census of the United States. These figures are for the year 1900.

There are 798,027 white children going to school in Kentucky—more than the number in any State outside of Texas.—These figures show persons of school age, five to twenty years, inclusive, for the States in the South Central division are as follows: Kentucky 798,027; Tennessee 780,421; Alabama 733,322; Mississippi, 633,026; Louisiana, 338,267; Texas, 1,215,634; Indian Territory, 159,125; Arkansas, 529,375. The total number of colored children going to school in Kentucky are 104,572.

Some other Kentucky figures follow: In Kentucky there are 924,219 men who are not married, 379,002 who are married, 32,868 who are widowed, 2,144 who are divorced and 1,994 about whose conjugal condition nothing is known.

There are 596,704 women who are not married, 378,296 who are, 769,935 who are widowed and 3,728 who are divorced.

The percentage of illiteracy among Kentucky people is 15.3 per cent, compared to 31 per cent. in 1890 and almost 30 per cent. in 1880.

Of Kentucky's 2,147,174 people the sub-division are white, 1,862,309; colored, 284,865; Indians, 102 Chinese, 57; those who are native born are 2,096,925. There are a few thousand more men than there are women in this State, the division being as follows: Males, 2,090,227; females, 1,056,947.

There are fifty Indian women and three Chinese women in the State.

ber, are Virginia, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, New York and Massachusetts. Of the negroes aged ninety-five years of age or over there are 295 in the State. There are 1,305 in Virginia and 635 in Georgia, negroes live longer than whites according to these figures, as there are only 3,471 whites who have seen ninety-five, while there are 4,934 negroes.

RELIGIOUS

At a meeting of the City Ministers' Union, of Cleveland, O., last week the pastors unanimously agreed to refuse to marry any person who had been divorced on other than scriptural grounds. This decision was reached after a long and animated discussion. A prominent judge gave figures at the meeting to prove that divorces were applied for at the ratio of one to every three marriages.

The Rev. George O. Barnes, age 75, the Kentucky evangelist and convert to Dowicism, closed a series of meetings in the church at Whitesburg, Tuesday. Rev. Barnes declared the coming of the Messiah near at hand. He said: "Would that I could see Eastern Kentucky lendriden district immortalized and reformed before I go away. I will never die but will meet God in the natural flesh within a few months." He refused the Professorship in the Zion church of Theology in Zion City, Chicago, to devote the remainder of his life in Kentucky's lend district.—Augusta Chronicle

A VERY CLOSE CALL

"I stuck to my engine, although every joint ached and every nerve was racked with pain," writes C. W. Bellamy, a locomotive fireman, of Burlington, Iowa. "I was weak and pale, without any appetite and all run down. As I was about to give up, I got a bottle of Electric Bitters, and after taking it, I felt as well as I ever did in my life." Weak, sickly, run down people always gain new life, strength and vigor from their use. Try them. Satisfaction guaranteed by all druggists. Price 50 cents.

Little Earnest—Gran-pa, is there really 'honour among thieves?' Gran-pa—No, my son; thieves are just as bad as other other people.

BROKEN NECK CURED IN FIVE MONTHS.

The following special from New York, dated Jan. 19th, says: "Cured of a broken neck, James Dunn, seventeen years old, has been discharged from a hospital, where he spent five motionless months, rigid in a plaster cast and with heavy weights at his head and feet, which held his body immovable."

The operation and cure have attracted great attention among surgeons. Dunn was injured by diving from a pier while bathing. Three vertebrae were crushed and chipped. He was kept alive with great difficulty during the operation. The splintered bones were removed and the fractures set. Then the whole upper body, neck and head, were placed in a plaster cast.

Dunn was laid upon a table and heavy weights attached to his head and feet. He was told that to move meant death or permanent helplessness for him and he became the most patient person imaginable. The bones knitted perfectly and when the cast was removed the boy was found to be as sound as ever."

HON. D. L. MOORE.

Of Mercer county, is a candidate for Congress in the Eighth district, to succeed Hon. G. G. Gilbert, subject to the action of the Democratic party. Your support is earnestly solicited.

The Interior Journal has the following to say about the pauper counties:

"It is more than likely that frauds have been committed on the State treasury by rascals and moral thieves in criminal prosecutions. Slipshod county attorneys and attorneys for the Commonwealth and ignorant or conniving trustees of the jury fund have suffered witnesses to be summoned for the Commonwealth, who were wholly ignorant of any fact, solely for the purpose of getting the fee. Dogs have been killed in the presence of a large number of witnesses and the slayer has been arrested and tried for killing John Smith, the unfortunate name of the deceased canine, and the witnesses have all claimed and been paid their attendance. Conspicuous and farcical frauds of this kind are picked out, and because they occurred in mountain counties, many very poor people, reasoning in the most illogical way, begin to abuse what they call pauper counties. A man who once starts on a fallacious line never stops until he lands in a lunatic asylum, unless by the grace of God, he violently butts up against some impregnable fact that even a fool can't get over or around. A fraud is committed in a mountain county; a mountain county is a pauper county; a pauper county is something that takes more out of the State treasury than it puts in; ergo, a mountain county is no help to the State; make it pay its own way or get out of itself. This is a fair sample of the course of reasoning. Many of us, perhaps some of the best of us, have gotten to be money idolaters. We estimate a man by his wealth. Money can buy a title in any monarchy on earth. Money can buy respectability in any Republic on earth. The first question asked when a neighbor dies is did he leave a will? How much was he worth? Is it in bank stock or cash notes?"

Our mountain people are here. They are of the same blood and breed that we are. They worship the same God. They have the same history that we have and cherish the same hopes and aspirations that we do. The accidental circumstances of thinner soil and bad roads have made them poorer, not worse than we. They commit their open crimes; we practice our subtle frauds. They kill an enemy; we swindle a neighbor. In dispensing hospitality, as John Fox puts it, they give "durn nigh all" their taters to the stranger; and we take durn nigh all the taters a stranger has.

Some day and may be some day soon, the tables may be turned. The mountains are coming. They are coming in greater power and wealth. The doors of the inner chambers, where untold treasure has long been buried, are being hammered down. We will then be proud of our mountain cousins. We will go to see them, glad to be invited to take off our hats and bonnets and stay all day. We will trace kinship that we never thought of before. Today the proudest Baron in England is he who can trace his blood to William the Conqueror, a bastard, a thief, a perjurer, a robber, a rapist, a murderer and assassin—what will we care when they get rich whether our mountain people lived in pauper counties or in Goshen. When they come to their own, what will we care whether they rascaled the State out of a few dollars' witness fees, or get rich, like our present corps of millionaires, by robbing the people? When they get rich they are our long lost half brothers with a strawberry mark on his left arm.

In a letter to Speaker Eli H. Brown, which was read to the House Monday, Gov. Beckham replied to the attack made upon him in the Senate last Thursday by Senator J. Campbell Cantrell. In this letter Gov. Beckham says he is not a candidate for United States Senator and will not be a candidate for that office before the next Legislature. Notoriety, Senator Cantrell wanted and a personal attack on the Governor seemed the only way to him to get it. There must always be a black sheep, and Cantrell is "it."

The man, who has more politics than brains, is to be pitted rather than censured, because of the fact that the Lord has created him such a weak, dependent, despicable creature.

SCRAPS

(BY JET)

Children love play, grown folks display.

Automobilist—Say, where can I get some repairs made? I've met with an accident.

Farmer—What d'ye want—a machine shop or hospital?

"I hear you are making lots of money."

"My dear fellow, I lead a regular hand to mouth existence."

"You don't say so? What are you doing?"

"Practicing dentistry."

She—And are you really so much better since you returned from your trip abroad?

He—Yes, indeed. I'm quite another man, I assure you.

She—Well, I'm sure all your friends will be delighted to hear it.

Mistress—Whatever have you done with the cold meat, Jane?

Jane—Well, mum, yes told me as how whin the man from the "Hot-tentot Blanket Fund" called again I should give him the cold shoulder. So I just wrapped it up and gave it to him.

Teacher: "After all the trouble I have taken, you are most imperfect in your lesson. Surely you could not have found it so hard to learn!"

Pupil: "It wasn't because it was so hard to learn, teacher, but it was so easy to forget!"

A little three year-old miss, while her mother was trying to get her to sleep, became interested in a peculiar noise and asked what it was?

"A cricket, dear," replied the mother.

"Well," remarked the little lady, "he ought to get himself oiled."

If Johnny Jones has seven dogs, And every dog is white;

And 14 cats come chasing 'round— Each one as black as night;

And each two cats have 18 lives Less three destroyed by rats—

How many lives must 3 dogs take Before they kill eight cats?

"I've got a job now," said the first rat.

"That so?" replied the other. What are you doing?"

"I'm working down at the creamery making holes in Schweitzer cheese and taking lard out the bung holes of kegs with a twist of the tail."

Where Eliza was Struck—Some careless boy or girl threw an apple out of one of the windows of the photograph gallery while the high school was being taken Friday and struck Eliza Harum just west of the drugstore, inflicting a large bruise—Medley cor. Mountain Echo.

Grandmother gave Nannie and Ernest an orange. "I wish there were two; but, if you divide this one," she said, "each of you will get a taste." As Nannie took the fruit-knife from the table, Ernest remarked anxiously: "If one of us should sacrifice, I would get two tastes."

Here is the germ of something that seems funny. One can see the woman, but there is some dispute in this office over the kind of a case in which she is. Some say it is a suit case, others a burial case. Among the solutions suggested are beer case and smierkase. Take your choice.

"Yaas, sah. De ting what dis sah country needs is moore prisons, sah—moore prisons."

"Why, Uncle Ned, there are plenty of prisons. Every State has its penitentiary and—"

"Oh, yaas, sah. I knows erbout de pennytentures. Dey's penny tentures enough, but de penny tenture is chock full of penny rascals, an' de thousan-dollar rascals caint git in, sah. What dis sah country needs is some million-dollar tentures, an' it needs 'em mighty bad."

A small, five-year-old boy, who had recently become the brother of another little boy, was sent to the grocery the other day to get some loaf sugar. By mistake the grocer gave him granulated, and the boy was sent back to have it changed.

"How do you like your new brother?" asked the grocer, as he was weighing out the right kind of sugar.

"Oh, I don't like him very much," the little fellow answered. "He cries all the time."

"Why don't you change him, then, as you do the sugar?"

"We can't change him now, 'cause we've used him three days."

THE VIEWS OF GOV. VARDAMAN OF MISSISSIPPI

In his inaugural address delivered at Jackson, Miss., Tuesday, Gov. Vardaman said of the negro race:

"As a race he is deteriorating morally every day. Time has demonstrated that he is more criminal as a free man than as a slave, that he is increasing in criminality with frightful rapidity, being one-third more criminal in 1890 than he was in 1880."

ILLITERATES MOST LAW ABIDING.

"The startling facts revealed by the census shows that those who can read and write are more criminal than the illiterates, which is true of no other element of our population. I am advised that the minimum illiteracy among the negroes is found in New England, where it is 21.7 per cent. The maximum is found in the black belt—Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina—where it is 65.7 percent. And yet the negro in New England is four and one-half times more criminal, hundred for hundred, than he is in the black belt. In the South, Mississippi, particularly, I know he is growing worse every year. You can scarce pick up a newspaper whose pages are not blackened with the account of an unmentionable crime committed by a negro brute, and this crime, I want to impress upon you, is but the manifestation of the negro's aspiration for social equality, encouraged largely by the character of free education in vogue, which the State is levying tribute upon the white people to maintain."

"The better class of negroes are not responsible for this terrible condition, or for the criminal tendency of their race. Nor do I wish to be understood as censuring them for it. I am not censuring anybody, nor am I inspired by ill-will for the negro, but I am simply calling attention to a most unfortunate and unendurable condition of affairs. What shall be done about it?"

REPEAL FIFTEENTH AMENDMENT.

"Surely something must be done. My own idea is that the character of education for the negro ought to be changed. If, after years of earnest effort, and the expenditure of fabulous sums of money to educate his head, we have only succeeded in making a criminal out of him and imperilling his usefulness as a laborer, wisdom would suggest that we make another experiment, and see if we can't improve him by educating his hand and his heart. There must be a moral substratum upon which to build, or you cannot make a desirable citizen."

The Governor also declares that the people of the nation should rise up and demand the repeal of the Fifteenth amendment.

SCHOOL BOOK BILL PASSED BY SENATE.

A surprise was the passage of a uniform School Book Bill by the Senate without a dissenting vote. It was a combination of the various bills offered in the Senate and was formulated by the Educational Committee. The State commission will be the Governor, Auditor, Treasurer and the three members of the Board of Education whose duties shall be purely ministerial.

The real adoption will be made by a county board consisting of the County Superintendent, County Judge and County Attorney, and from among the books offered by the various companies, the State Board must select the ones endorsed by the greatest number of county boards.

A set of prices is affixed varying from ten cents for a spelling book to eighty cents for a higher geography.

It is believed the unanimous endorsement of the Senate for this bill insures its becoming a law soon.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Between the incidents of to-day's lesson and those of last Sunday's an interval of about 15 months elapsed, during which time Jesus was at work mostly in Judea.

"He came to Nazareth." In the course of a tour through Galilee. Until a little over a year before, Jesus had been a carpenter in Nazareth. Then He had come away to the wilderness of Judea to John the Baptist, and since that time strange reports had come back to the home town. Men said that He had become a great prophet, and was rivaling John the Baptist himself (John 4:1, 2), and, strangest of all, news had come from Capernaum that He had miraculously healed the son of a prominent man there (John 4:46-54), and from Cana, only four miles away, that He had turned water into wine at a wedding feast (John 2:1-11). The synagogue on the day of which we are studying was full of His fellow townsmen, all eager to see whether the young carpenter was really so great, after all.

"He entered, as His custom was, into the synagogue." Referring to His custom of preaching in the synagogue whenever possible. That He had always been an attendant at the synagogue went without saying. "Stood up to read." As a distinguished man whom everyone wanted to hear, Jesus was invited to conduct the service. "The prophet Isaiah." Comparison with the original shows that this is a free translation, probably taken from a Greek or Aramaic version. Note the point in the quotation where Jesus stopped. If He had gone on, His next words would have been, "and the day of vengeance of our God." John the Baptist would have gone on, Jesus did not. This quotation is priceless to us, because it clearly gives Christ's conception of His mission. Note that His mission is not so much to the strong and the fortunate, as to those who need help—the poor, the captives, the blind, the bruised. The reference is not to physical conditions alone, but to the heart life. "The acceptable year of the Lord." "The welcome year; the time of God's especial bounty."—Adeney. The attendant: "The keeper of the sacred rolls." "And sat down." "To speak. This was the custom." "Eyes fastened on him." Not simply because of curiosity, but held by the strength of His wonderful personality.

"To-day hath this Scripture been fulfilled." Jesus' great declaration of Himself and His mission to His former townsmen. He probably said a great deal more than is reported. "All bare Him witness." His power was undeniable. "Words of grace." Both message and manner surprise the people by their graciousness. "Is this not Joseph's son?" His fellow townsmen evidently knew nothing of the virgin birth. They felt His power, but that He was really great—as great as had been reported, they could not believe, for was not the son of an ordinary carpenter? If He believed any such thing of Him, He would have to prove it to them. "And He said unto them:" Probably seeing that they were in a mood to demand proof of His great claims. "Physician, heal thyself." A challenge to do for His own town what it was reported He had done for others. Jesus never accepted such challenges, though they were often given. Neither the truth were often given. Neither the truth were often given. Neither the truth were often given.

"But He passing through the midst of them went His way." "This does not assert either (1) that Jesus became invisible, or (2) that He had miraculous protection. The temptation scene at the wing of the temple precludes the idea that Jesus would resort to such means of saving Himself. It is enough to consider the person of Christ overpowered the fickle mob."—Adeney. This is a remarkable illustration of a fact that we must not forget in thinking of the personal appearance of Jesus. Most of the great painters have emphasized the gentleness and sorrowfulness of the Saviour at the expense of the strength and even majesty which the Gospel story sometimes reveals. Compare with this John 10:38 and 18:6.

Sam Hysinger says he about has the man located who robbed him of about $125 a short time ago. Sam sold him several head of cattle and accepted a check for them, which, when presented for payment went to protest, and by the time Sam found that the check was no good, the cattle had been sold, money pocketed and the man had left the country. It is to be hoped that he will be successful in bringing the scoundrel to justice and secure for him lodgment in the pen, where he properly belongs.

From the following which appeared in a recent issue of Jessamine Journal, one would infer that "Brer" McCarty or some of his immediate friends had been suffering a hardship at the hands of some of his or their city friends:

"Our readers have doubtless heard the expression, 'That farmer is horse poor,' or 'That farmer is land poor,' but it is a safe assertion that no one has realized that some farmers are 'company poor,' but such is nevertheless the fact. To explain our meaning let us count the cost to many farmers, whose homes are always the meeting places of from five to fifteen 'city folks' and neighbors every Sunday. Taking the average, we figure: If each visitor drove one horse to his buggy and each horse was fed two meals during the day, that would mean twenty-five cents per feed, would amount to $5. The hay they would eat in a day would amount to $3, or a total of $8 for the horses. Now, if each visitor eats as often as the horses at the same price, they will have devoured $3 worth of Mr. Farmer's provisions. Not counting the work of the wife and help in the kitchen and hands at the stable, the company will depart leaving the farmer $16 to the bad. This happens at many places each Sunday of the year and each day during the semi-annual protracted meetings held at the church near by. Is there any wonder that there are so many farmers complaining of hard times, $1,000 per year going into the entertainment fund?"

There will be an open session of the Senate held in the college chapel next Thursday night. All cordially invited to come.

Our Representative, W. A. B. has introduced a bill making it a misdemeanor to sell toy pistols. This would be a splendid law upon our statute books and we hope Mr. Davis will be successful in putting his bill through. Many a boy has been taught to carry pistols, simply by having a toy one when so-called large enough to walk, and when grown up, they want a real pistol. What a serious mistake it is for parents to buy such toys for their children.

MCKEE

(Jackson County.)

Mrs. J. R. Llewellyn has just recovered from an attack of sore throat.

Dr. Auryx is going to Louisville to take a post graduate course in medicine.

Atty. J. R. Llewellyn has built a law office on main street opposite Welch's store.

Frank Welch of this place, has moved to Central City, in Muhlenburg county.

Two oil wells have been put down in this county in the last two months, one a failure and only found gas in the other one, but this should not discourage our people as we know we have plenty of oil if the people will only go work and have it developed.

Town trustees have been elected here. The first McKee has had since 1882. We hope it will be an improvement to the town, if they will have a stock law enforced and keep some of W. H. Clark's dogs, hogs, cows and horses off the streets, which are as follows: 14 dogs, 35 hogs, 7 cows, 15 horses and mules.

Circuit Court closed here Saturday. The court was so pressed with business that penal and felony cases only were tried, except a few equity cases which were decided by the Judge at his room, of nights.

Felony cases, as follows were tried: For murder, Jacob Seaborn, 21 years in the pen; Isaac Harrison, one year, on false pretense; McKinney boys for shooting from ambush at one red fox, two years each in the pen. R. B. Baker, hog stealing, one year in the pen; John E. Holcomb, for burning store, when case was called Judge Faulkner was sworn off bench and the Governor appointed ex-Congressman White, of Estill county, to try the case. A jury was brought from Owsley county and resulted in a mistrial, six being for conviction and six for acquittal. A special term was called to dispose of this case beginning August 22nd.

This is said to be the strictest court ever held in Jackson county. If ever a place needed its chimney corney laws ruled out and court held in earnest, it is this place, and Judge Faulkner says he means to see things changed in his courts. Commonwealth's Attorney Lewis, of Hyden, is doing his duty, a thing unheard of here for the last few years.—H. J. Mullins, of Rockcastle, was here during court having a bill of exceptions prepared, to take an appeal for his son, Wm. Mullins, who was given 13 years in the pen for killing James Singleton.

B. F. Hare, Supt. Miami Cycle & Mfg. Co., Middletown, O., suffered for ten years with dyspepsia. He spent hundreds of dollars for medicine and with doctors without receiving any permanent benefit. He says: "One night while feeling exceptionally bad I was about to throw down the evening paper when I saw an item in the paper regarding the merits of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. In the highlands of Indiana—a two hours ride from Louisville there flow wonderful healing waters, that you'd spend hundreds of dollars to enjoy if they were in Europe.

A recent visitor from Philadelphia, who formerly went to Carlsbad every year, said: "I do not see why anyone goes to Europe for medicinal waters. The water is as beneficial, and the scenery and surrounding country, the air and the opportunities for recreation are better; the hotels and all accommodations are just as fine as in Europe."—and this gentleman is a native of Switzerland.

The splendid wooded hills with the cool, invigorating air of these highlands where one can enjoy rambles in the depths of the forest, or rides and drives among the numerous bridle paths and roadways, afford pleasure for those who desire rest and quiet while at the splendid and exhilarating casinos one can have all the entertainment and social pleasure possible at the most fashionable resorts.

The Lieutenant's Christmas Box

B. F. B. RICH.

MISS FELICIA DE SMYTHE was a flake on the upper crust of San Francisco society. Her claim to social eminence could not be disputed, for the De Smythe family tree was traceable as far back as 1849, and Felicia herself was heiress to an immense fortune, the foundation of which had been laid by De Smythe's many years previous to his daughter's brilliant debut. By a shrewd financial stroke, he had cornered the soap market at a period when saponaceous and other commodities were shipped thither around the Horn, and he had sold at a tremendous profit. The absence of soap had not embarrassed the population in the least, so far as its abominations were concerned, but soap was a necessity for miners' jeans and flannel shirts and so De Smythe wisely held onto the cargo until he got his own price for it. Unlike sundry other San Francisco millionaires, he could, therefore, truthfully be said of him that he had made his money in a nice clean way.

It was but natural that the envious, malicious tongue of the social snob, where so much wealth and aristocracy were concerned. A corner groceryman's wife to whom De Smythe's mere had given the cut direct one afternoon in the park from the height of her carriage and through the lorgnette's glassy eye, had meanly realized—such is the petty vindictiveness of some natures—by doctoring that the De Smythes went broke upon their arrival in California and Mrs. De Smythe had taken to plain sewing to help supply the larder with beans, flapjacks and an occasional rasher of bacon. Nor was that all. The grocery lady had cunningly documentary evidence up her sleeve in the shape of a letter of thanks over the De Smythes' signature (minus the family crest, now conspicuous on their stationery) for the former's patronage. But this proved a mere ripple on the surface of the De Smythes' tidal wave of social success. Shortly after the grocery store a "To let" sign and its occupants went back to the Pattersons, where they hinted a legacy had been left them. The base theory, however, that they were bought off has strange to say, its adherents to this day.

Felicia's formal entrance to society had been made via the shrimp-pink tea route. The list of her accomplishments was appalling. She had spent three whole years in a seminary, three whole months abroad, had acquired a haughty, distingue air, and, through persistent absorption of cod liver oil, a lissome figure, which was always faultlessly gowned by Mme. Vere de Vere, the French modiste. She entertained extensively at the De Smythe mansion in town, their villa at Belvedere and their bungalow at Burlingame. Suitors prostrated themselves vainly before her. It was destined that not until America warred with Spain that Felicia's heart was thrilled by love.

It happened on the arrival of the Ninety-ninth Tennessee volunteers. Curiosity had taken her, with her champagne, to the Red Cross rooms at the Perry building. She dropped her handkerchief. It was picked up by a very good looking young lieutenant and handed to her. She bowed her thanks. The officer lifted his hat. Felicia smiled faintly—blue blood may be kinder to a soldier than a civilian, especially if he be shoulder-strapped. Again the lieutenant bowed, then moved away.

"How nice of him not to presume!" thought Felicia. "He certainly showed the refinement of a gentleman and a thoroughbred. Instead of speaking, he contented himself with silent admiration."

As a matter of fact, the lieutenant had just been off the tail of a large cheese sandwich and couldn't have uttered a syllable to save his life.

The Ninety-ninth Tennesseans went into camp. Felicia, a day or so later, ordered the coachman to drive to the Presidio. When she had located the lieutenant she graciously asked him if the men of his company needed any assistance. If so—she indicated her purse with a dainty gloved hand. Conversation after that did not languish. Felicia found army life quite interesting. She brought Papa de Smythe with her the next time and he invited the good looking young volunteer to call.

Another fortnight and Lieut. Bogleston, of company Z, Ninety-ninth Tennessee, U. S. V., was also a flake on the upper crust of San Francisco society and his handsome form was seen at all elite functions.

"To think that you are going to live among those dreadful Filipinos and in a climate that is a continual Hammam bath!" gurgled Felicia with a burst of tears that took the starch out of the lieutenant's collar and reddened her nose unbearably. "What a shame you can't dine with us on Christmas day! But never mind—I'll send you the biggest Christmas box that I can find with a delightful surprise in it and lots of good things."

"You are such a good thing yourself," murmured the lieutenant, indistinctly. "What was that?" interrogated Felicia, anxiously.

"I was saying that you are the dearest angel in all this world, my love," replied Bogleston, finally.

"Oh, that is a very sweeping assertion," she protested, coyly. The young officer shuddered convulsively.

"Don't, Felicia, don't. I beg of you, ever use that expression again," he implored. "It is peculiarly obnoxious to me. I—I really cannot bear to hear it from your lips."

"Why, dearest," questioned Felicia with jealous forebodings. Was it possible that her lieutenant had a past—that he had ever loved another, and her words recalled painful memories? He did not explain the cause of his agitation and the agony of parting temporarily erased it from Felicia's mind.

In another hour the noble transporter Sardinia had ridden the blige water bay tide in safety and turned her nose eagerly toward the pure ozone outside the Golden Gate.

The lieutenant's Christmas box was packed, sealed carefully, labeled in bold letters, and delivered at the quartermaster's depot for shipment to Manila. In size it eclipsed all its companions. Even the colonel of the regiment would be the recipient of no such testimonial from Americanshore. It towered impressively above everything else in the box line, and required the brawn of three expressmen to dump it from the wagon. Its contents would have stocked a delicatessen store.

Stowed away amid this assortment of canned luxuries was a mysterious parcel from a leading jeweler's. It contained a pair of red, white and blue suspenders with "Remember the Maine" embroidered thereon by Felicia's own fair fingers, and adorned with buckles upon which the lieutenant's monogram was embossed in rubies, diamonds and sapphires—thus carrying out the patriotic color scheme with charming effect.

The De Smythe coachman had been discharged and pending the hiring of another, Felicia was forced to patronize street cars along with plebeians. Spending her last cent on the box to Manila, she borrowed a nickel of a policeman to get home on, and had just wearily thrown herself on a divan when her maid announced that an applicant for the coachman's position was very anxious to see her.

"It's just this way, miss," explained the man when admitted to the presence of the heiress. "I thought if I got ahead of the others and told you as how Lieut. Bogleston would recommend me if he was here and knew I wanted the job, you might give it to me."

"Ah," said Felicia, brightening. "You have been in the lieutenant's employ as coachman—then?"

"I guess not. If you ask was I his partner, I guess yes."

"What do you mean?" demanded Felicia. "I mean that back in the capital of Tennessee a few years ago Bogleston and I worked together in the city hall—he was head janitor. He always was a bright chap; took to politics naturally and made his way up in the world. That's how he got his commission—through a pull. One thing I like about him, he never was the least way stuck up, though he does hate like Sam Hill to have folks know about the janitor business. But I had to speak about it to let you know why he would be the first to say a good word for me."

Felicia sat as though stunned. The lieutenant's words came back to her with frightful significance. "Don't use that expression again—I cannot hear it!" No wonder he couldn't endure to hear the words "a sweeping assertion." They reminded him of brooms and cutspans and ashbins and things. Felicia's blue blood almost congealed in her veins.

With great presence of mind, she dismissed her caller and telephoned to the family lawyer. For the ensuing few hours the wires between California and Tennessee were kept piping hot. The coachman's story, alas, proved corroborated. Upon learning the awful truth Felicia took to her bed with nervous prostration. In the basement of the De Smythe residence yet stands a large box, the contents of which would stock a delicatessen store, and within which is a superbly jeweled pair of suspenders blushing unseen in a bed of straw packing. This is not a tip to burglars, but a record of the inglorious shattering of love's young dream.

And in faraway Manila, beneath a spreading palm tree, yet sits a good looking young lieutenant in an army coat somewhat in need of laundering; but of this he recked not, for no heiress is there to see. Christmas approaches again and again, and the thermometer orbits itself towards the other blue. Swathed in the diaphanous folds of mosquito netting, his eyes glued to a pair of marine glasses, Lieut. Bogleston can the horizon ever and anon for a Christmas ship and a Christmas box that will never, never come.
